Beyond Boundaries

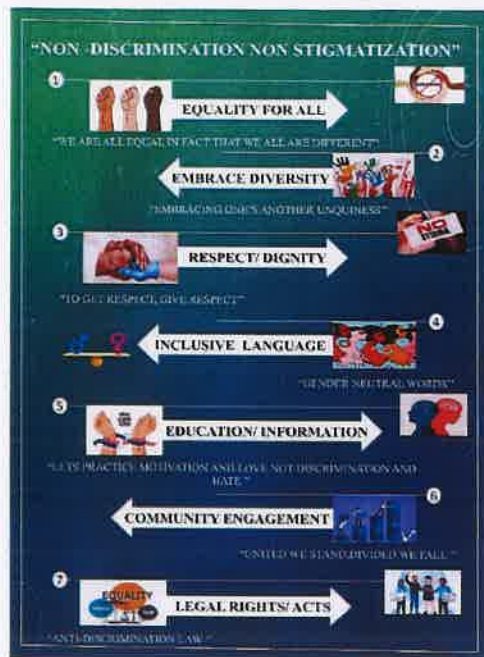

Away From Black & White,
Let's remould the principles right,
Where everyone gets equal respect,
And no heart feels the weight of neglect.

Erasing the line of discrimination,
Where acceptance & unity becomes our foundation,
Let's join hands together for a stronger base,
Building a beautiful world, where love has its place.

No matter the colour, creed or race,
Every soul deserves a fair & equal space.
No shade is lesser, no tone is wrong,
Every voice adds beauty to our diverse song.

Stand against the catlapers, the pointed stares,
Embrace your strengths & the right to your shares.
For, in the eyes of humanity we all are the same,
A world united, where peace is our aim!

A Very Sorry State of Affairs...

"The idea that all for some lives matter more than others is the root of all that is wrong with the world."
- Dr. Paul Farmer.

19 year old Amrita withered a agony on the floor of a primary healthcare centre. The unrelenting labour pain wracked her body; each wave of torment stronger than the last as the young life inside her refused to show his head to the world. The eighteen hour long struggle ended with the charwomen pulling him out from between her mother's legs. He did not cry. The very word that had given it life in the womb was scurried around its neck in a hangman's noose. The young - would - be mother lived her life out as a withering bed of bare tiles to be united with her strangled son in the afterlife.

This dystopia is a reality in many pockets of our country where tribal or even lower caste women are denied labour beds and have no alternative except to deliver on the floor. They face verbal or even physical abuse, are deprived of pain medications and deliver unassisted by nurses or doctors of higher castes or sections of being untouchable. Such obstetric violence is only a tooth in the gear of discrimination in our healthcare machinery. This type of discrimination is not an isolated or temporary phenomena; rather it is timeless and institutionalized with a multigenerational

Topic :- Non Discrimination & Non Stigmatization

Historically discrimination and stigmatization have played a critical role in marginalizing some class of people or even individuals.

Practice: an interdisciplinary field combining biology, law, ethics, medicine, & judiciary. All disciplines have been utilized so that these type of problems can be resolved.

Non Discrimination:-

In the past people have been discriminated on the basis of their gender, religion, caste, nationality, disability and their personal characteristics.

This type of bias should be resisted in the healthcare field where men and women should be treated equally irrespective their gender, religion, socio-economic status, education and characteristics may be.

There have been instances in the past where people have been discriminated or targeted because of their socio-economic status or religion and also the place from which they have come.

Conclusion: The MGMIHS Bioethics unit, Navi Mumbai celebrated the 'World Bioethics Day 2024' from 26th to 30th July 2024, as per guidelines given by International Chair in Bioethics. A total of 192 students from MGMIHS's constituent colleges in Navi Mumbai (118 students) and Chhatrapati Sambhaji Nagar (74 students) campuses celebrated the 'World Bioethics Day 2024'. The participating students came up with their views, ideas, creativity, critical thinking on various topics in the form of innovative Poem, Essay, Drawing, Rangoli, Short film and video, Poster, Debate and Role plays and won many prizes.
