597	2014-2015	04.12.2014 to 18.12.2013	Respiratory Med	A 77-year-old lady was referred with progressive breathlessness over 3 years. She was breathless walking 100 yards on the flat and could not manage stairs. There were no other respiratory symptoms. Past history was of myocardial infarction (MI) in 1984, and duodenal ulcer 1988. She had stopped smoking after her MI, with a prior 40 pack year smoking history. Her medication consisted of simvastatin, lisinopril, furosemide, aspirin, amiodarone, salbutamol and omeprazole. All of her cardiac medications were commenced post-MI. She kept no pets. On examination there was central cyanosis, finger clubbing and resting oxygen saturations of 83% on room air. JVP was not elevated and there was no peripheral oedema. Cardiac examination revealed an aortic sclerotic murmur and respiratory examination revealed bibasal fine inspiratory crackles in the lower zones. Abdominal and musculoskeletal examination was unremarkable.	MD	DR PV POTDAR	Navi Mumbai

598	2014-2015	2.2.14 TO 9.2.14	Respiratory Med	A 41-year-old woman presented with a 4-month history of shortness of breath on exertion, with no associated cough or systemic symptoms. Her previous medical history included Raynaud's phenomenon, and 18 months dysphagia and dyspepsia. A recent barium swallow demonstrated severe oesophageal dysmotility and inco-ordination of the gastro-oesophageal junction. She smoked (20-pack year smoking history), and was overweight (body mass index 43). Examination was normal, apart from skin changes of hands and mouth (Fig. 3.1). Pulmonary function tests (Table 3.1), a CT chest (Fig. 3.2) and an echocardiogram were performed. She had a modestly elevated pulmonary arterial pressure at 35mmHg.	MD	DR PV POTDAR	Navi Mumbai
599	2014-2015	24.07.2014 to 31.07.2014	Respiratory Med	A 42-year-old Caucasian female was referred with a cough. She had been diagnosed with asthma 6 years previously on the basis of a recurrent cough, productive of clear or purulent sputum, and exertional breathlessness; she had no history of wheeze and her peak flow values did not vary significantly. She had been treated with high-dose inhaled corticosteroids and long acting beta-2 agonists with little benefit, and a course of oral prednisolone was unhelpful. A 3-month trial of proton pump inhibitor therapy also gave no relief. She did intermittently use topical nasal steroids for sinusitis but had noticed no impact on her cough. She had never smoked. On examination her SaO₂ was 98% on air. She had crackles in both midzones on auscultation but no wheeze. Her pulmonary function tests are shown in Table 4.1 (NB Patient coughed during expiratory manoeuvres)	MD	DR PV POTDAR	Navi Mumbai

600	2014-2015	19.09.2014 to 27.09.2014	Respiratory Med	A 51-year-old lady presented to A&E with shortness of breath for several months, much worse over the last 2 days, now with orthopnoea. Because of associated ankle swelling, she had been treated with diuretics 2 weeks earlier, which produced a 5kg weight loss and some temporary improvement in her shortness of breath. She had no associated history of chest pain, paroxysmal nocturnal dyspnoea, cough or sputum, no significant past medical history, and no personal or family history of lung disease. System review was negative. She had never smoked, was unemployed and had two children. On examination: ◆ Tachypnoeic, undistressed, afebrile, obese (BMI, 40kg/m²) ◆ Pulse 120 and regular, with respiratory paradox, BP 157/92mmHg, JVP to earlobes, 3rd heart sound ◆ Pitting oedema to thighs ◆ Crackles and wheezes in chest ◆ SaO₂ 58% on air, 99% on high-flow oxygen ◆ ECG, sinus rhythm, small complexes and poor R wave progression. A diagnosis of congestive cardiac failure, due to silent myocardial ischaemia, was made. She was given diuretics and O₂. Whilst awaiting a CXR, bloods and	MD	DR PV POTDAR	Navi Mumbai
601	2015-2016	18.02.2015 to 26.02.2015	Respiratory Med	A 54-year-old Asian man presented to the emergency department with a 3-month history of increasing dyspnoea, drenching night sweats and weight loss. This was associated with a dry cough and occasional small volume haemoptysis. He was born in Pakistan, moved to the UK 3 years previously and had visited his family in Pakistan 4 months previously. He worked in a restaurant and smoked 20 cigarettes per day. On examination, there was cervical lymphadenopathy and signs of a left pleural effusion. A chest drain was inserted and the effusion drained to dryness.	MD	DR PV POTDAR	Navi Mumbai

602	2015-2016	18.05.2015 TO 25.05.2015	Respiratory Med	A 32-year-old American woman was referred for investigation of left-sided subcostal pleuritic chest pain. Four months earlier she had been treated for left lower lobe pneumonia (radiologically confirmed) requiring two courses of antibiotics (amoxicillin and erythromycin). After this illness the chest pain persisted, and she felt 'tired and drained'. She also reported an intermittent cough, productive of small amounts of 'off-white' sputum, but denied other respiratory symptoms. She had had no haemoptysis, fevers or sweats, anorexia or weight loss. She had a history of a left-sided pneumonia aged 8, and of being 'chesty' until 13; otherwise she had been well. She had never smoked, and seldom drank alcohol. There were no abnormal physical signs. Her CXRs are shown in Fig. 7.1a and b.	MD	DR PV POTDAR	Navi Mumbai
603	2015-2016	16.07.2015 to 24.07.2015	Respiratory Med	A 40-year-old accountant, recently moved into the area, presented with a 3-month history of cough and, over the previous month, dyspnoea on exercise. Initially antibiotics seemed to help, although repeated sputum cultures were negative. Whilst skiing at 3000m, he developed severe dyspnoea, which greatly curtailed his physical activity. On his return he also noticed some dyspnoea during his usual exercise of cycling and circuit training. He had no relevant past medical history, apart from mild hayfever as a teenager. He had never smoked, drank six units of alcohol a week, and had no pets. He was married, heterosexual, with only one partner for many years. There was no history of reflux, sinusitis or wheeze. 604	2015-2016	10.08.2015 to 18.08.2015	Respiratory Med	A 49-year-old man was referred from the haematology clinic with 18 months of breathlessness on exertion, a non-productive cough, and wheeze. He had been diagnosed with follicular lymphoma 4 years previously, and had received extensive chemotherapy, as well as chest radiotherapy, a year later. One year after that, and 2 years prior to this presentation, he underwent an allogeneic bone marrow transplantation (BMT, sibling donor), which had been complicated by development of chronic graft-versus-host disease affecting his eyes and mouth. He had never smoked and there was no prior history of any lung disease. His current medications included prednisolone 10mg once a day, cyclosporin 50mg twice a day, penicillin V 250mg twice a day, acyclovir 200mg twice a day, fluconazole 50mg once a day, co-trimoxazole 960mg 3 times a week, alendronic acid 70mg weekly, and omeprazole 20mg once a day. 605	2015-2016	07.09.2015 to 16.09.2015	Respiratory Med	A 53-year-old social worker was referred with a 2-year history of daily cough productive of small amounts of clear sputum. He had been given antibiotics every 3 months or so for episodes of increasing sputum purulence. He had no haemoptysis, exercise limitation or wheeze. Past history was of severe sinusitis in childhood requiring surgery, but he denied any childhood respiratory problems. At age 21 he had severe pneumonia and since then described colds 'going to his chest' in winter time but, until the last 2 years, had been well in-between these episodes. He was an ex-smoker of 10 years with a prior 25-pack year history. Systemic enquiry revealed no current upper airway or GI symptoms (e.g. bloating, fatty stools or difficulty maintaining weight) but he had intermittent arthralgia affecting his wrists, elbows and shoulders. He had 2 children and denied any family history of respiratory disease. On examination he weighed 91.7kg, BMI 29, there were some coarse crackles in the right base, but otherwise	MD	DR PV POTDAR	Navi Mumbai

606	2015-2016	04.11.2015 to 24.01.2015	Respiratory Med	A 53-year-old lady presented to her GP with a lower respiratory tract infection following a holiday in Spain. Two courses of antibiotics produced little response. Because she was wheezing, and had a history of exercise wheeze in the past, she received beclomethasone and salbutamol inhalers; in addition, her atenolol for hypertension was stopped. This produced a short-lived improvement but wheezing and intermittent dizziness continued, despite various changes in asthma therapy. Finally, despite a normal peak flow, she received a course of oral steroids pending referral to the clinic. In clinic she brought a peak flow chart showing values varying between 400 and 500 L/m, but with no hint of morning dipping. She had never smoked, had a past history of sinus problems, had no children (but several miscarriages) and was divorced. She slept well. Recent routine haematology and biochemistry (including thyroid function) were normal.	MD	DR PV POTDAR	Navi Mumbai
607	2015-2016	04.01.2016 to 11.01.2016	Respiratory Med	A 31-year-old man presented to the emergency department with dyspnoea, slowly progressive over a period of 3 months, associated with fatigue, anorexia and 2-stone weight loss. One week before presentation he developed night sweats. He was otherwise fit and well, with no relevant past medical or family history. He was Indian and had moved to the UK 5 years previously. On examination he was febrile, tachypnoeic (20/min) with oxygen saturations of 96% on room air, and signs of a large left pleural effusion. A BCG scar was present in the right deltoid area. 608	2015-2016	09.02.2016 to 20.02.2016	Respiratory Med	A 78-year-old man was referred for continuous positive airway pressure (CPAP) therapy. He had developed snoring and witnessed apnoeas over the past 5 years (having had an unsuccessful uvulopalatopharyngoplasty), along with excessive daytime sleepiness over the last year (Epworth Sleepiness Score, 16/24). He had lost 5kg (BMI of 21). Three years previously he had an ineffective prostatectomy for urinary retention and dribbling. He had started shouting during sleep and thrashing around in bed. His wife thought that he had 'slowed up' over the last year. He was now finding it difficult to play the piano, but put this down to his being 78. On more direct questioning he described dizziness on getting out of bed in the mornings, after meals and if he got out of a chair too quickly. He had been impotent for several years and noticed he no longer sweated. He was taking no medications. 609	2015-2016	03.03.2016 to 12.03.2016	Respiratory Med	A 51-year-old man was referred with bouts of coughing followed by syncope. He described one initial episode of syncope following a sudden bout of coughing 18 months previously, and had been free of symptoms until 3 months ago. He described a persistent cough most days, not worse at any particular time of day or night (not wakening him at night) and not associated with any other respiratory, nasal or reflux symptoms. He had two or three episodes each week, where he rapidly lost consciousness following a few short coughs; this included one episode when he was driving his Heavy Goods Vehicle (as a refuse collector for the local council). She had obstructive spirometry (FEV 1 1.06L, 36% of predicted, and FEV 1 /FVC ratio 38%) with no reversibility (FEV 1 improvement less than 15% after nebulized salbutamol). She had been on maximal therapy for asthma for several years. She was a smoker with an 18-pack year history, and worked as a shop assistant. 611	2015-2016	24.04.2016 to 30.04.2016	Respiratory Med	A 62-year-old man, with a history of pulmonary sarcoidosis, attended with progressive breathlessness over the preceding 6 months, such that current exercise tolerance was only 50 yards. In addition he had noticed increasing ankle swelling over the last 4 weeks. He denied any other respiratory or systemic symptoms and was a non-smoker. His diagnosis of sarcoidosis was made 3 years previously following presentation (Table 17.1 PFT 1) with dyspnoea, and CT findings of diffuse ground glass with ill-defined centrilobar ground glass nodules. Because the appearances were atypical for sarcoidosis, a surgical lung biopsy was performed, which showed numerous discrete non-caseating granulomas in a perivascular and peribronchiolar distribution. There was patchy lymphocytic infiltrate, paucity of eosinophils and minimal fibrosis. Overall the appearances favoured sarcoidosis over alternative diagnoses. Following the lung biopsy, he was commenced on 40mg prednisolone, which improved his breathlessness (Table 17.1 PFT 2). Over the next 2 years his steroid dose was gradually tapered down to 5mg/day, but when seen at that point (Table 17.1 PFT 3), the dose was increased to 20mg as his dyspnoea had worsened. 612	2015-2016	09.06.2016 to 20.06.2015	Respiratory Med	A 48-year-old Caucasian woman presented to her general practitioner with dyspnoea on minimal exertion. She was wheezy on examination, peak flow was 210L/min (predicted = 470) and she was therefore diagnosed with asthma and started on inhaled β2 agonist and inhaled steroid. Despite this, she continued to deteriorate, but responded well to a short course of oral steroids. She was started on a combined high-dose steroid and long-acting β2 agonist inhaler, and provided with inhaler technique education. On review 1 month later, her peak flows had stabilized at around 370L/min and an asthma treatment plan was drawn up with the patient. Four months later, she presented to the acute medical take with progressive deterioration over a 2-month period, requiring recurrent short courses of steroids from her GP. Her Epworth sleepiness score (ESS) was 17/24 (upper limit of normal = 9). A routine sleep history revealed no obvious cause for the sleepiness, although she was currently seeing a counsellor for depression. Sleep study was normal, apart from approximately 30 minutes of snoring. A diagnosis of depression-induced sleepiness and tiredness was made. Investigations showed modestly elevated inflammatory markers (CRP, 75mg/L), a CXR showed pulmonary infiltrates, several sets of blood cultures, viral hepatitis screens and a myeloma screen were negative. Bronchoscopy was non-diagnostic. A liver biopsy showed caseating granulomas. His wife described characteristic obstructive apnoeas during the night, increasingly frequent over the last year. The snoring had become so bothersome for the patient's wife that they often slept in separate rooms. The patient awoke feeling refreshed and did not complain of feeling sleepy during the day. He denied sleepiness on prolonged drives, was able to concentrate on reading a book and could watch TV for an hour or so in the evening without falling asleep. He had worked as a commercial airline pilot for the last 15 years and sleepiness had never interfered with his work. He had been successfully treated for essential hypertension for 12 years with bendrofluazide. On examination the patient had retrognathia, a collar size of 16 inches, BMI 25, normal nasal patency and no appreciable abnormality of the oropharynx. Completion of the Epworth sleepiness score (with wife present and agreeing with his account) gave a score of 3/24 (upper limit of normal, 9). In the preceding 3 weeks her symptoms had worsened, also with episodes of feeling hot and shivery. Three courses of antibiotics from her GP had not improved symptoms. She had previously been given a diagnosis of late onset asthma, on the basis of several year's history of shortness of breath and wheezing at night, worse in the springtime and with exposure to oil seed rape. She had no other atopic history. Symptoms had improved a little with inhaled beclomethasone 200µg, two puffs twice daily and salbutamol, as required. She was an ex-smoker with a 10-pack year history. She had a past medical history of hypertension, palpitations, congenital double uterus and absence of right kidney, recurrent cystitis, previous cholecystectomy, Herpes zoster infection and irritable bowel syndrome. Her long-term medications included diltiazem, furosemide, nitrofurantoin, omeprazole and mebeverin. On examination she was dyspnoeic at rest, with a heart rate of 110 and respiratory rate of 32. His presenting complaint was increasing and severe daytime sleepiness (he had fallen asleep whilst on the telephone and driving), general tiredness and fatigue, and restless sleep. He was known to be a snorer, but not every night. He had been a smoker for 25 years, having given up recently. He had had rheumatic fever aged 6 and a squint operation aged 8. Aged 16 he was 6ft 2in but by 17 he had lost 2in and was noticed to have a scoliosis. By aged 20 this was bad enough to require a spinal fusion. On examination he was 5ft 9in and thin (BMI 21). He gave a background history of minor exertional breathlessness over the last 6 months. A CXR 3 months previously had raised concern over a pulmonary nodule, and this had prompted a CT confirming multiple subpleural nodules, up to 16mm in size, along with borderline enlargement of mediastinal and axillary lymph nodes. An interval CT to assess any change was awaited at the time of his acute presentation. His background was of Type II diabetes mellitus (15 years duration), hypertension and mild chronic renal failure (recent urea 8.0mmol/L, and creatinine 151µmol/L). Systemic enquiry revealed intermittent nasal blockage, discharge and crusting. On examination he had a sinus tachycardia of 115, respiratory rate of 25/min, Sa O 2 of 26% on Fi O 2 0.6 and BP 105/70. She had presented to her GP 3 weeks previously with cough, fevers and myalgia, and despite courses of amoxicillin and erythromycin, she was not improving. On direct questioning, there was a 3-month history of progressive dyspnoea and a dry cough. She had been seen by her GP four times over the last 6 months and treated with antibiotics for chest infections on each occasion. Her past history included controlled epilepsy, and bilateral knee replacements for osteoarthritis several years ago. She was a lifelong non-smoker with pigeons living in her roof space, but with no other personal or family history of note. Her current medication included phenytoin, paracetamol and diclofenac. On examination she was sweaty, although afebrile. His GP had tried increasing doses of budesonide and formoterol, several courses of antibiotics and short steroid courses with no benefit. He had stopped smoking 20 years previously. On examination he had a BMI of 46.4, no finger clubbing or cyanosis. Resting oxygen saturation on air was 94%. Respiratory examination revealed fine left	MD	DR PV POTDAR	Navi Mumbai

637	2017-2018	03.01.2018 to 10.01.2018	Respiratory Med	An 89-year-old woman presented with increasing shortness of breath over a 4-week period. This was associated with an irritable dry cough and lethargy, but no chest pain or constitutional symptoms. She had an extensive background history including ischaemic heart disease, myocardial infarction 2 years previously, left ventricular failure, mild and well-controlled asthma, and treated hypertension. She also suffered with short-term memory loss, which had been worsening for the last 2 years, and had been diagnosed as vascular dementia. Her normal exercise tolerance had been limited for several years by a combination of left ventricular failure and hip osteoarthritis, but this had significantly reduced from 100 metres to 30 metres in the last three weeks. She was on multiple cardiac medications, had never smoked, and had no known asbestos exposure. On examination, she was afebrile, tachypnoeic (28/min), and had an SaO₂ at rest of 96%. Her venous pressure was visible at the jaw and there was pitting oedema to the calf bilaterally. The left chest was dull to percussion with absent breath sounds and decreased expansion, associated with rightward	MD	DR PV POTDAR	Navi Mumbai
638	2017-2018	07.02.2018 to 14.02.2018	Respiratory Med	Six weeks previously a 75-year-old retired farmer had developed 'bronchitis' with a cough, fever and wheeze. Two courses of antibiotics (amoxicillin and doxycycline) provided little symptomatic benefit. Two weeks prior to his appointment, in late-January, he noticed his fingers intermittently becoming 'purple and cold', but with no associated white or red skin finger discolouration (Fig. 44.1). This only occurred when helping his son on their pig farm early in the morning, and improved a little as the day progressed. He had never smoked and was on no regular medication. On examination, he had bibasal crackles on auscultation. Finger oximetry failed to register a peripheral arterial waveform or a valid oxygen saturation. Despite palpable symmetrical peripheral pulses, his distal phalanges were cyanosed (Fig. 44.1). His toes appeared normal.	MD	DR PV POTDAR	Navi Mumbai
